ONE HUNDRED BLACK MEN OF
NEW YORK, INC.

Our presenter Mr. Valone Brown
Project Manager for Junior One Hundred

WHAT THEY SEE, IS WHAT THEY'LL BE

The Junior 100 Program

Our Why

Our society recognizes the need to provide more mentoring to boys of color. Specifically, mentoring is one of four key interventions necessary in order to address the needs and opportunity gaps (e.g., access and exposure, achievement, resources, education) of boys of color

There is evidence that:

- Both formal and informal mentoring have the potential to benefit Black boys in a range of areas, including academics, confidence and social-emotional well-being
- Mentoring that promotes Black boys' racial identity may in turn lead to positive effects in other aspects of their lives, which may be facilitated by connecting Black male youth with mentors who have shared life experiences
- Mentoring may be able to lessen the negative effects of racial discrimination on Black boys.
- Group mentoring approaches seem to support Black male youth's social-emotional development through group processes

Our Why

In a survey study of 576 African-American men across the United States, only 7% reported that they were involved with formal mentoring programs.

86% of the sample reported having an informal mentor, and it was found that the presence of informal mentors predicted 2.8 times the odds of getting good grades, while controlling for age.

Youth Mentorship

RB Education RB Empowerment

Mentorship, guidance, and relational connection are foundational to supporting the growth of youth as they transition from childhood into adolescence and young adulthood. RiseBoro offers mentorship to provide support, to cultivate cultural appreciation, to strengthen community consciousness, and to cultivate transferable social, emotional, and interpersonal skills to youth.

Adult Education

RB Education

In addition to our programs for students, the Youth Center also hosts classes for adults, including basic education courses in reading comprehension, writing, social studies, science and math, English as a Second Language (ESL) classes, and High School Equivalency (HSE) exam preparation.

Food and Nutrition

RB Empowerment RB Health RB Seniors

The food and nutrition programs at RiseBoro invite our communities to build a vibrant, robust food system with and for all of us. Food is central to how we live our lives – our work, our health, our neighborhoods. Our food should be a source of joy, connection, health, and solidarity. From building farmers markets and urban farms, to training and supporting cooperative businesses, and assisting with nutrition programs, we invite community members to take control of our food – to create a food system that is just and equitable, that allows the people and places we care about to thrive, that works for all of us.
