WHAT THEY SEE, IS WHAT THEY'LL BE

The Junior One Hundred Program

Our Why

Our society recognizes the need to provide more mentoring to boys of color. Specifically, mentoring is one of four key interventions necessary in order to address the needs and opportunity gaps (e.g., access and exposure, achievement, resources, education) of boys of color

There is evidence that:

- Both formal and informal mentoring have the potential to benefit Black boys in a range of areas, including academics, confidence and social-emotional well-being
- Mentoring that promotes Black boys' racial identity may in turn lead to positive effects in other aspects of their lives, which may be facilitated by connecting Black male youth with mentors who have shared life experiences
- Mentoring may be able to lessen the negative effects of racial discrimination on Black boys.
- Group mentoring approaches seem to support Black male youth's social-emotional development through group processes.

Our Why

In a survey study of 576 African-American men across the United States, only 7% reported that they were involved with formal mentoring programs.

86% of the sample reported having an informal mentor, and it was found that the presence of informal mentors predicted 2.8 times the odds of getting good grades, while controlling for age.

Our Why – Benefits of Mentoring

1. Provide Knowledge
2. Help You Improve
3. Broaden Professional Network
4. Provide Encouragement
5. Help Advise
6. Can Learn From Their Experience
- 7 . Costless (Moneywise)

My home is a safe place.

I am resilient and can get through anything.

I am exactly who my kid needs.

I am grateful for the time I have with my kids today.

My greatest contribution to the world may not be something I do,
but someone I raise.

Taking care of myself is part of taking care of my family.

I am a leader to my children.

My home is full of love and joy.

I do what it takes to give the best to my family.

I am my children's rock.

My little family is the best team
I could ever have.

I am making happy memories with my child.

Everything I do serves a purpose for my family.

My kids trust me and look up to me.

I am a great role model for my children.

I deserve time to myself.

Parenthood is not easy, but I can do it.

My family and I are in this
